Chapter 8 · Stage 3 — Volume

These are structures, not proven copy. Fill them with your own words and your own specifics. A message you can't say out loud in your own voice will not survive contact with a real business owner.

THE FOUR-PART ANATOMY

Every message that gets answered does the same four things in the same order.

1. Proof you looked — one specific, checkable detail. Does 80% of the work.
2. The observation — one sentence connecting that detail to a problem or a window.
Not a pitch.
3. What you do — one line, in their units. Booked estimates. Not "marketing."
4. A tiny ask — a yes/no question that costs nothing to answer.

Two to four sentences total. The goal of the first message is a reply, not a call.

DM

[ONE-LINE OBSERVATION connecting it to a problem or an opportunity window. No pitch.]

[WHAT YOU DO, in their units.]

[TINY ASK — yes/no.] ```

No greeting block. No signature. Write like a person texting.

EMAIL

``` subject: [lowercase, specific to them, no pitch]

[SPECIFIC DETAIL.]

[OBSERVATION — one or two sentences.]

[WHAT YOU DO, one line, in their units.]

[TINY ASK.]

[First name] ```

Keep the body short enough to read on a phone without scrolling.

COLD CALL OPENER

``` "Hey [NAME], this is [YOUR NAME] — I'm local, over in [TOWN]. This is a cold call, so I'll be quick.

[SPECIFIC DETAIL + OBSERVATION, one breath.]

[WHAT YOU DO, one line.]

Is that something you'd want to hear about, or should I leave you alone?" ```

Naming it as a cold call disarms what they're already thinking. The explicit exit gets you a real answer instead of a polite dodge — and a fast no is a cheap no.

WALK-IN

Your biggest edge, and almost nobody does it. An agency three time zones away cannot walk into a landscaping office on a Tuesday morning.

- Go at a slow hour for their trade
- Ask for the owner by name — which means you looked him up, which is step one already done
- Say the four-part message
- Leave one page
- Get out. Three minutes.

``` "Morning — is [OWNER NAME] around?

[SPECIFIC DETAIL.] [OBSERVATION.]

[WHAT YOU DO, one line.]

I'll leave this with you — worth a conversation?" ```

BEFORE YOU SEND

- [] First line is about them, not you

- [] The specific detail could not be sent to any other business
- [] The ask is yes/no, not a request for 15 minutes
- [] You said it out loud and it sounded like a person
- [] SMS only after A2P 10DLC registration (asset 13)
- [] Same message, unchanged, for 300 attempts before you judge it
